The 19th Annual Middle East Petroleum Insiders Briefing (MPI), 5-6 May 2012

*Two-Day Downstream Executive Briefing
Presented by FACTS Global Energy*

Middle East oil production continues to dominate the global oil market; however, there are many forces at work which need to be considered. Political turmoil and social change in the MENA region has kept the pressure on oil prices in 2011 and 2012. Concurrently, oil markets are entering a period of transition as the Atlantic Basin continues to decline and East of Suez demand assumes even greater importance. Uncertain economic times, political tension, sustained high prices, and increased emphasis on energy conservation all could result in a dampening effect on long-term petroleum demand. Further, the "call" on OPEC is plateauing as Iraqi production, OPEC NGLs, non-OPEC production, slowing demand growth, and "alternatives" erode the market. Given these forces at work, will a change in the "balance of power" occur in the market?

Now in its 19th year, the annual Middle East Petroleum Insiders briefing offers authoritative and insightful analysis regarding the outlook for this crucial region. It will be an opportunity to hear from FGE personnel and discuss issues that are fundamental to how the oil markets evolve with industry leaders.

Key Issues to be covered

- The political outlook in the Middle East and its impact on the market
- The impact on margins of the developing trade imbalance
- The potential for reduction of gasoline demand in the East of Suez market and the impacts on refiners
- Refinery construction/closure plans in the Middle East and Asia
- The ability of governments to manage product subsidies given sustained high prices
- The response of refiners and shippers to the IMO regulations on bunkers

Event 5

The 6th Annual Middle East Gas Insiders Briefing (MGI), 9-10 May 2012

*Two-Day Gas/LNG Executive Briefing
 Presented by FACTS Global Energy*

The past few years have witnessed fundamental changes in the Middle East gas market. The region has always been a major player in supplying the global market with hydrocarbons. It is now becoming increasingly important on the demand side of the equation due to a significant rise in oil revenues, continuing subsidies, increased spending power, and large infrastructural investments. These dynamics have led to gas shortages in almost every major market. The gas supply balance is changing as exports may decrease and imports may increase.

Key Issues to be covered

- Key Paradigm Shifts in the Oil and Gas Industry
- Key Technical and Economic Aspects of Unconventional Gas Production
- Key Issues in the Middle East Upstream Gas Sector
- Cost of Gas in the Middle East
- Liquids from Gas - Implications for the Middle East

- In-Depth Review of Domestic Gas Demand in the Middle East Countries
- Role of Middle East Gas in the Atlantic Basin and Asian Markets
- Global LNG Supply and Demand
- Salient Issues About LNG Contracts

Individually Priced
 Bookable Separately

Event 6
