(Bloomberg) -- Singapore LNG, which operates country's only liquefied natural gas import and storage terminal, will soon call for proposals from companies to use its spare capacity to grow ancillary services, Minister of Trade and Industry S. Iswaran says at LNG Supplies for Asian Markets conference in Singapore.

* Terminal is growing ahead of demand with 4th storage tank expected to come online in the first half of this year

* Terminal performed 23 vessel cool-downs and store-and-reloads and 19 truck loadings last year
