SINGAPORE, March 23 (Reuters) - The marine refuelling and oil storage hub of Fujairah has begun publishing monthly data on its bunkering sales volumes in partnership with S&P Global Platts, Fujairah authorities announced on Tuesday.

As one of the top three marine refuelling ports in the world, "the availability of bunker sales data will further increase market transparency," said Salem al-Hamoudi, director of the Fujairah Oil Industry Zone during the virtual International Fujairah Bunkering & Fuel Oil Forum.

"Bunker sales are a leading indicator of how the global economy is doing," said Dave Ernsberger, global head of content & market insight at S&P Global Platts during the event.

For February, Fujairah reported 631,430 cubic metres of bunkers sold across six categories of marine fuels, the data showed.

Most of it - 494,037 cubic metres - was 380-centistock low-sulphur fuel oil.

The data will be freely available on the 20th of each month here: <https://fujairah.platts.com/>.
